

Guide to MLA Documentation for Print and Electronic Sources

This information sheet contains documentation style examples for print and electronic sources recommended by the Modern Language Association (MLA) 7th Edition (2009). When using the examples, be sure to follow the spacing and punctuation exactly, with periods, commas, and colons in the same places. Check with your instructor to confirm that the MLA style is an acceptable documentation style for your assignment. Remember to DOUBLE SPACE and INDENT all but first lines.

Remember:

- Many electronic resources do not supply all the information for a full citation. In such cases, cite the information that is available. URLs are now optional.

In-Text Citation (Parenthetical Acknowledgement)

The MLA documentation system eliminates the need for footnotes by using parenthetical acknowledgements in the body of the paper. These brief citations refer the reader to the complete citation found on the "Works Cited" page at the end of a report or research paper.

The in-text citation is placed in the body of the paper following the specific part of the text to which it applies. If the citation comes at the end of a sentence, it is placed before the period.

The in-text citation usually consists of the author's last name and a page reference enclosed in parentheses. If there is no author, provide the first words of the title.

e.g. In-text citation

By the end of the Middle Ages, wealthy families, such as the Medici in Florence, were the most influential art patrons (Stokstad 620).

e.g. Complete citation for the Works cited

Stokstad, Marilyn. Art History. 3rd ed. Upper Saddle River, New Jersey: Pearson, Prentice Hall, 2008. Print.
